Home homework while growing up

When I was little, my brother and I, every day after school, my father would require us to do a page in our math workbook before we could go out to play. During the summer, we had more pages to do, but every night during the school year we had to do a page. And the kids in the neighborhood used to laugh because the Chou kids had to do home homework before they could come out to play.